“My approach to providing exceptional service involves collaboration with clients to ensure my advice is practical and meets their goals. I am responsive, thorough, and personable, and I enjoy getting to know my clients.”

Sophie von Bergen is a member of the firm’s litigation practice team and has experience representing clients in all phases of litigation, with a focus on complex litigation matters, business disputes, and insurance recovery for policyholders. Sophie represents businesses and individuals in state and federal courts in Oregon. Her experience representing clients as both plaintiffs and defendants allows her to analyze issues from multiple perspectives and appropriately advocate on her clients’ behalf.

Before joining Miller Nash, Sophie practiced at a Portland law firm where she represented clients in commercial litigation matters, including complex cases. During law school, Sophie was a judicial extern to the Honorable Magistrate Judge Stacie F. Beckerman at the U.S. District Court for the District of Oregon where she researched and drafted opinions in civil cases. She also advised businesses at the Small Business Legal Clinic on transactional matters, including on intellectual property issues. Sophie has also co-authored a chapter on issues of gender and politics in developing countries and Lewis & Clark Law Review published her Note on causes of action against companies engaged in “greenwashing.”
