“I believe that responsiveness, clear and candid advice, and reliability are essential values in client care. I endeavor to establish a strong foundation with these values in mind in pursuit of achieving our clients’ objectives.”

Benjamin Tarczy is an associate supporting clients in the energy, manufacturing, and shipping department. Ben primarily concentrates his practice on commercial litigation, representing manufacturers and corporations in complex and high-stakes disputes throughout California in state and federal court. His background includes consumer warranty defense, construction defect defense, as well as successfully resolving an array of business disputes. Before joining Miller Nash, Ben was a litigation associate at a California law firm.
