“I enjoy providing solutions in a practical and cost-effective way, while delivering clients with responsive, high-caliber service. I seek to understand each organization’s mission, culture, and goals so that I can better provide them with thoughtful and sensible guidance.”

Ed Choi is a skilled litigator with a proven record of successfully leading clients through a variety of business disputes and employment litigation. His practice focuses on complex employment claims and class action defense in state and federal court, arbitration, and agency investigations. Ed represents and advises clients of all sizes and across multiple industries, including healthcare, technology, retail, education, and manufacturing, among others. He has extensive experience litigating wage and hour class actions, discrimination and hostile work environment claims, trade secret disputes, business valuation and shareholder litigation, and consumer protection matters. Ed also regularly provides strategic counsel and advice to employers with a practical, client-oriented approach to minimize risk and to avoid liability.
